RAINBOW COLLECTION WOWS DIAMOND WEEK ATTENDEES

10.04.14, 11:01 / World

Delegates to the third U.S. / International Diamond Week in Ramat Gan, Israel were treated to Eddy Elzas' collection of colored diamonds that is unrivaled in the world, the Israel Diamond Exchange reports. The standout piece of the collection – both figuratively and literally – was an exceptional stone so unique that all gemological experts who have examined it have refused to grade it: a 32-plus-carat multi-colored stone dubbed the Koi Diamond because it resembles the striped Japanese carp fish in shape and hue.

The precious gem was originally unearthed in the Republic of Congo over a decade ago and has confounded analysts ever since. When subterranean forces churned it out millions of years ago, as fate would have it, streams of iron became trapped within the stone, causing it to exhibit a whole range of colors, including light yellow, dark blue, black, and, primarily, orange.

IDE president Shmuel Schnitzer noted that throughout the week-long diamond festival, crowds of traders have huddled around the Koi Diamond's display case, which has been situated at the entrance of the bourse's trading hall.
